

A Benefits Counseling Guide

“When to Obtain Benefits Counseling Services”

What are Benefits?

Benefits are government funded programs that are provided to people based on a characteristic such as disability or financial need. Examples of benefits include:

- Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI)
- Local/Public assistance benefits (e.g. Energy Assistance, Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), Aid to Needy Disabled (AND), Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP/food stamps)
- Housing assistance
- Health insurance (e.g. Medicaid/Medicare)
- Other assistance

What is Benefits Counseling?

Benefits counseling is a service that helps individuals with disabilities and their families understand how Employment and other life decisions will impact their benefits.

Benefits counseling provides a clear, personalized plan to educate individuals with disabilities and their families that, in general, you will not immediately lose your cash benefits and health insurance if you work.

Benefits counseling addresses the fears and concerns many individuals and their families have about a reduction in benefits if they start work.

Benefits counseling helps each individual understand:

- What benefits the individual receives and why
- The work incentives available when they go to work
- How earned income impacts cash benefits, public assistance, and health insurance
- Reporting requirements for each benefit and public assistance program
- How to save money and build assets for self-sufficiency (e.g. Achieving a Better Life Experience (ABLE) accounts)

When to Seek a Qualified Benefit Counselor’s Assistance?

- Prior to seeking employment/education
- While conducting a job search
- When working with a Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) Counselor
- Upon obtaining employment
- Currently working and if changes occur while working
- Transition-age students (ages 14-24)
- ANYTIME employment is being considered!!
